HELPING OUR PLANET

a) A lot of people want to know what they can do to help the environment. A good place to start is to read about problems like climate change and endangered species. It is much easier to find out about these topics nowadays because there are so many websites about them. I recommend visiting the websites of some large international organisations.

b) The media nowadays is full of stories about environmental issues. A major concern at the moment is what is happening to coral reefs around the world. The temperature of our seas is rising all the time and if we don't do something now, a lot of marine life will disappear for good.

c) It used to be difficult to find a way that you could actually help the environment. There were very few small organisations that were active. Today, the situation is completely different, with hundreds of small groups taking action in their neighbourhoods or villages. This change has only occurred in the last few years, but it is already having a big effect.
